TURBO EDITORIAL

By John Podlasek

Welcome to another exciting, informative issue of TurboEdge. Our newsletter is dedicated to updating, educating, and helping TurboPlayers like yourself.

We promise to deal with the facts, not gossip, rumors, or speculations you might get from other sources. TurboEdge is produced here at NEC by TurboTeam members so you are assured of accurate and dependable information based on facts.

The response from our first issue was overwhelming. The comments and questions sent in from you, the TurboNation, helped create the exhilarating new issue. I hope you enjoy it.

TurboGrafx-16 Breaks 4Mb TurboChip Barrier

They said it couldn't be done, but now it is becoming a reality. Although NEC has the only available 16-bit CD ROM player which offers 5200 megabits (650MB), people who don't own a TurboGrafx-CD system have requested a TurboChip with more than 4Mb of memory.

Raiden is the first TurboChip-based game to offer 6Mb of power. The year is 2090 and alien forces have invaded Earth. Top aerospace engineers have analyzed wreckage from enemy planes to develop "Raiden." "Raiden" is technically superior to any aircraft on earth and only the best pilot can hope to handle it. The entire world is depending on you!

This unbelievable shooter blows the competition away with realistic backgrounds, more colors, more enemies on screen, and more game play than ever thought possible. Blazing Lazars is child's play when compared to Raiden. NEC has packed this arcade hit into 6-MEG of uncontested excitement.

A FANTASY JOB: THIRD PARTY

Meet Victor Ireland. Have you ever fantasized about becoming a publisher of hot video games? Victor and his company, Working Designs, have just become a brand new third party publisher and this fall will produce two great new games for the TurboGrafx-16 System: Cadash and Parasol Stars.

If you are a hard-core gamer, you must have dreamed at least once about publishing your favorite Japanese games or having them published in this country. Some of these dreams will just be dreams; however, Victor has made the dream come true.

How did he do it?

Victor is a professional computer programmer by trade. Some of you might have seen his writing about video gaming on CompuServe Information Services, Prodigy and GENie. His interest in the console gaming systems and the technical aspects of how they work started his writing about the 16-bit systems and their games.

Because he is officially a computer programmer, he is very familiar with the hardware of the 16-bit console systems, and through his research, he became aware of many potential software deals. He discussed this with his partner, Sylvia, and they decided to take a shot at becoming a third party publisher. "Why didn't we choose Sega or Nintendo?" asked Victor, "From my standpoint, there are simply too many Sega third parties to support such a limited base. And, on the Super NES, there were already too many people on the SNES bandwagon to justify our getting on, too. We wanted to choose a platform where there was plenty of great foreign product available for licensing and where we could stand out." TurboGrafx-16 was the platform.

Currently his days are spent translating Japanese to English, evaluating new games, staying in touch with industry contacts, managing his sales reps, and getting manuals, boxes, and advertisements ready to print. "This particular project has 'sidetracked' me from the programming end of things, which is a nice change."

Everyone should know that becoming a third party publisher is not easy. If it were easier, many people would be publishers by now. We asked Victor what difficult experiences he has faced as a third party publisher. He said "becoming one" was a bit of a challenge. "In the beginning, we had no product. NEC Japan did not want to make us a third party until we could tell them which products we were going to publish, and the Japanese PC Engine software companies would not talk to us about licensing until we were a third party. Kind of chicken or egg thing. Eventually, NEC Japan issued a statement to the Japanese software companies to which we were talking to the effect that we would be a third party as soon as we licensed a product - this seemed to satisfy them, and we began serious negotiations."

Victor continues, "Another challenge was in getting the various revisions of the games to test in a timely manner. Customs can hinder you, tying up EPROM (pre-production) versions of beta test copies sent to us from Japan for at least two or three days. I came up with the great idea of having the source files transmitted by modem to our offices where we would transfer them to EPROM for testing. After much trial and error, we figured out the problem and ended up transmitting the files at 2400 baud, which took about 30 minutes each time."

All his challenging efforts worked and two of his games will be published as scheduled this fall. Let us tell you about his games:

Parasol Stars: Bubble Bobble III

retains many of the features that made Bubble Bobble (BB) I and II so popular, both here and abroad. But, it adds many new features. Rounds are bigger on the screen on the higher levels, so the screen can scroll left or right, unlike BB I. In addition, there are 4 different kinds of Mega attacks, Water, Fire, Lightning and Star. The Mega attacks can be triggered when you collect 5 small bubbles with your magic umbrella. The basic scenario is that you have to save 8 planets (including yours) from the evil minions of the evil Chaostikahn (K aw ti con). The game has 10 levels, each with 7 rounds, one ending at level 8, and one ending after defeating Chaostikahn at level 10. In addition, there are lots of power-ups and secrets to unlock. The 3 meg game will ship in October, and has a suggested U.S. retail price of $59.99.

Cadash is a virtual carbon copy of the Taito arcade game of the same name. The only thing missing in the Turbo version is the timer. You still have four characters to choose from before you start your quest to save the King's daughter, Princess Sarasa, from the evil Baarougue. Each character (Fighter, Priest, Mage, Ninja) has different weapons and magic abilities, making the game fun to replay with different characters. The game also has a two player simultaneous mode (using the TurboTap), which also changes the way the game is played. The graphics in this game are some of the best in any PC Engine or TurboGrafx-16 game right now, and Turbo owners should be very happy with the amount of play value they'll get. The U.S. version of Cadash is 4 meg, will ship in November, and has a suggested U.S. retail price of $61.99.

PROFILE

Chris Nicolella, Age 19
TurboGrafx-16
Game Counselor

How long have you been a game counselor?

"It's been a little over one year. I started on September 1, 1990."

What are some of the things you do as a game counselor?

"The main part of my job is learning all the games we have out so I can give people quick and accurate answers on the TurboGrafx Game Support Hotline. I sometimes work with the Marketing department evaluating Amiga, IBM, and PC Engine games in different areas like graphics, playability, sound, and fun. I've also had a chance to play some new games for video taping in Chicago at a video production house. My game playing sequences then get edited down, and are used in our TV commercials."

What are some of your favorite new games that will soon be released?

"Andre Panza Kickboxing is very realistic and intense. Ys III-Wanderers from Ys is a great sequel with cool end bosses. Raiden is real exciting, since it's a 6 meg shooter with lots of fast action."

Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A Q&A

Q I am a proud owner of a TurboGrafx-16, but I have a question which I have heard many versions to which is, does the TurboGrafx-16 have a 16-bit processor? Another question, does TurboGrafx-16 have the same capabilities as the Genesis, or is it in some aspects better? If you could set me straight on this subject I would be very pleased.

Mike Rice
Kenly, NC

A The TurboGrafx-16 has a 16-bit graphics processor that provides for bigger characters, more colors, and more moving objects. The number of bits in the microprocessor is really not relevant. It's like asking which has a bigger engine – a dump truck or a Ferrari. To excel at entertainment, game machines need high powered 16-bit graphics, not number crunching microprocessors. We're moving a large number of colorful characters quickly around on the screen of a TV, not solving simultaneous differential equations. Therefore, the speed of the microprocessor is much more important than the number of bits that it has. TurboGrafx-16 has a faster processor (1.5 MIPS, Million Instructions Per Second), than Genesis (.70 MIPS). Speed is much more important than the bit count in video games. This allows for better, smoother gameplay. TurboGrafx-16 can move graphic and screen data faster than Genesis which greatly enhances gameplay. As for the other aspects in which Turbo exceeds Genesis, TurboGrafx-16 has the TurboTap which allows up to 5 players at once. Genesis can only allow 2 players. TurboGrafx-16 has a handheld – TurboExpress – which uses the same software. You can take all of your favorite TurboGrafx games on the road.

And then there's the TurboGrafx-CD Player – the future of video gaming available first for TurboGrafx-16.

Q I've recently read an article in Electronic Gaming Monthly saying, "NEC has announced that the CD-ROM system card will be upgraded from 64 kbits to 2 Megabits. It will be called the 'Super System Card' Version 3.0." Can TurboEdge give us more information on the "S.S. Card?" When does it arrive in stores? Do we have to buy a whole new CD-ROM unit with the "S.S. Card?" I hope you can answer these questions. Thanks a lot.

Rhoel Tanada
Torrance, CA

A The "Super System Card" is a memory card that will be introduced for the PC Engine-CD in Japan this October for a retail price of $74. It adds 192K to the present 64K, giving 256K (2 megabits) of RAM. This means developers will have more memory to create more fun and challenging games. The card will be sold separately, so to upgrade the CD-ROM system, all that's needed is the new "Super System Card." All the CD software is upwardly compatible from the original CD to the Super CD. We expect to announce plans for the U.S. introduction of the upgrade card soon.

Q I am really considering buying your "TurboBooster," but I have a few questions. Do I have to have a VCR hooked up to my TG16 system? Also do I have to hook my system to a stereo for better sound? All I really need is a more detailed description of the "TurboBooster." Keep up the good work!

Noel Harmonson
Ojai, CA

A The TurboBooster is an audio/video adapter that provides direct video and stereo sound (with direct hook-up to your stereo receiver, TV or VCR) which lets you enjoy all the great music and sound effects packed into every TurboChip game card! And it delivers sharper, clearer video, adding a new dimension to game play. The TurboBooster provides stereo sound with stereo TVs or with mono TVs in combination with your home stereo audio

Q I must compliment you on a fine job while putting together TurboEdge. The articles were interesting and the reviews were good. I hope more companies will put advertisements in the future issues so your magazine will grow. I have a question, I have heard of something called NID compression technology, what exactly is this?
Andrew Lin
Neshanic Station, NJ

- designed to be used for multimedia in both the office and home. NID technology incorporates 100 to 1 video compression that provides full-motion, still pictures and stereo audio. NID will have the ability to work with either the TurboGrafx-16 video game system or PC/At compatible computers. This technology allows you to enjoy interactive multimedia that incorporates "live video." Applications include entertainment, education, information, training and more. However, this is only a technology at this time and it will be a while before NID will be a part of the TurboGrafx-16 video game world.

read it immediately. I'm glad that I can be kept up to date for free. I have one question about the TurboExpress to be answered in Q&A in TurboEdge. I've noticed there is an antenna port (or maybe video in?) which the TV Tuner adapts to. I know the TV Tuner takes in the signal and converts it to a tuned signal for TV. I was wondering since a VCR doesn't send a tuned signal, can you hook up a VHS VCR to the TurboExpress? That would be the ultimate Turbo INVENTION!!! I was also wondering if the TurboExpress offered a screen protection cover sold separately?
Steve Twors

A NEC has developed a new video compression technology - New Interactive Display (NID)

Q You guys are the greatest! I was excited to see TurboEdge in my mailbox. I opened it &

A In addition to broadcast TV, you can watch your favorite video cassettes on the TurboExpress screen by using the TurboVision TV Tuner. Just connect your VCR to the TurboVision A/V port using a Twin-RCA-To-Miniplug connector (you can purchase one at any electronics supply store) and you're ready to watch your videos. Your TurboExpress-TurboVision system can also serve as an extra monitor for your camcorder allowing one person to operate the camera and another to hear and watch the action in color. All VCR's and Camcorders are different, so please refer to your manual for proper connections and converters. We do not have a screen protection cover; however, you could purchase a carrying case (several are available from third party manufacturers) to protect the entire unit.

Here's some tips from some of our recently released games.
Impossamole
MISSION:
Defeat Emperor Vlarg and recover the lost sacred scrolls of eternal life.

TIP 1
Certain weapons work better in different areas. Your success relies on learning what weapons work best.
TIP 2
Falling objects sometimes contain valuable items.
TIP 3
If a scroll can't be found, chances are you missed it earlier in the level. You must restart the level.
TIP 4
Sometimes enemies can't be avoided. You must work quick.
Yo' Bro!
MISSION:
Annihilate Professor Liverhosen's Evil creation and save California.
TIP 1
Use grenades and rockets to open secret doors and sewers. On level one: move toward the upper right from the starting place of Lil' Bro. Turn right, down the first street that you cross. Use a grenade to bomb next to the door of the first building you see.

TIP 2
Lil' Bro will shoot his standard sling-shot faster while he is stopping. Use this to your advantage.
TIP 3
Some enemies need to be hit numerous times with grenades and the slingshots. Rockets will destroy any enemy with one shot. Use the rockets wisely.
TIP 4
For a real challenge, set the Game Difficulty to HARD.

Q Do you sell the TurboGrafx-CD player without TurboGrafx-16?
Frank Jimenez Jr.
Brooklyn, NY

A Yes, in fact that's the only way it is sold. When you purchase the TurboGrafx-CD player ($299.99 U.S. retail price) you will get the docking station, the CD-ROM unit, a system card, A/V cables, a new, larger AC adapter and a carrying case. The TurboGrafx-16 System ($99.99 U.S. retail price) is needed to operate the TurboGrafx-CD player, but both units are sold separately.

Q I have two questions. The first is about the CD system. Is the CD player a standard CD player? The second is about the TurboExpress. I have not been able to see one yet and I wanted to know if it is an LCD TV or a picture tube TV screen?

Scott Gatewood
Memphis, TN

A The TurboGrafx-CD player is actually a CD-ROM unit. It has all the features of a regular audio CD player plus the capabilities of reading and storing information. This is why our system can play CD games and music as well as the new CD+G (Compact Disc + Graphics) music discs. The TurboExpress handheld has a high resolution, active matrix backlit color LCD screen with 238 x 312 resolution. Game Gear has only 30% of the resolution of TurboExpress and Lynx has only 20%. Furthermore, TurboExpress can display 512 colors while Lynx and Game Gear can display just 16 and 32 simultaneous colors on screen respectively.

WIN A TURBOEXPRESS

It will take everything you know about TurboGrafx-16 – titles, characters, bosses and good spelling – to win the TurboEdge Crossword Contest. Just complete the crossword puzzle (some answers can be found in this newsletter) mail in to TurboEdge with your name, address and phone number and all correct entries will be tossed in a bin. From there we will draw the name of one lucky winner who will receive TurboGrafx-16's hot handheld portable, TurboExpress, a $299 U.S. retail value.

Stumped? Just call our Game Support Hotline, 1-900-FUN TG16 (1-900-386-8416) and our TurboTeam will give you one answer. But remember to ask your parents' permission before you call. *The first 30 seconds of this call are free, but you will be charged 99¢ for each minute after that (up to 5 minutes). The charge for this call will appear on your next phone bill.

Only one entry per person. Deadline for entries is November 25, 1991. Please mail crossword puzzle, name, address and phone number to:

BONK BONKS DRUGS IN CANADA

Visit these TurboGrafx-16 Dealers for the latest Hardware and Software:

Most of you have the top selling TurboGrafx-16 game, Bonk's Adventure. Bonk, the star of Bonk's Adventure, attacks life head on! He uses no weapons to attack problems and takes control of his life. He eats well and turns his enemies into friends.

It was only natural that Bonk became the spokesperson for Canada's Health and Welfare "Really Me" campaign which seeks to reinforce a person's self esteem and discourage the abuse of drugs and alcohol. Bonk is a wholesome and clean character that eats healthy and has lots of fun with life! Bonk cares about kids using drugs and alcohol! He knows they can ruin your life! Bonk would rather have you play video games in your spare time to relieve the problems in your life than take drugs!

NEC Technologies Canada, Inc. became involved to provide help by informing young people about drug and alcohol abuse because their product, TurboGrafx-16 appeals to the same target group. Bonk became the anti-drug hero!

NEC believes strongly in the anti-drug effort. We have donated many TurboGrafx-16 units to charities who have set up drug-free arcades. We believe in keeping kids off the street and away from the drug scene! The TurboGrafx-16 video game really draws the kids into shelters and there the kids can receive info on drugs and substance abuse.

NEC Technologies Canada, Inc. was presented with an award during the Winterlude festivities in Ottawa, Canada. The award was the first of its kind to recognize the outstanding contribution NEC has made in the anti-drug arena through Bonk, the clean living hero!

The anti-drug fight is continuing this year in Canada. "Really Me" literature and buttons are still handed out and we still support programs that Health and Welfare are involved in with game donations, prize packages, etc. With Bonk on our side, we hope to get the anti-drug message out.
